If you need more space, continue on a separate sheet of paper and attach this to the back of your appeal.

Following a substantial investment in Konnektis Communications Ltd, the company suffered a serious data breach which led to a huge impact on our client's health. Following that, in the early stages of the pandemic, our client had a cancer scare which involved moderately invasive diagnostics which is ongoing and Mr Howells found the stresses of trying to keep Konnektis solvent, support customers and prevent redundancies extremely overwhelming. The company suffered greatly during the pandemic which was financially devastating for our client personally and ultimately led to Mr Howells having to receive private medical treatment for physical and mental exhaustion by mid 2021.

We trust you will consider our client's reasons behind the late filing of the return sympathetically. Mr Howells is now recovering and receiving ongoing medical support, and has since brought his tax affairs up to date as soon as he was able.

Dear Sirs

We are contacting you with reference to a recent claim made for relief under the Research & Development Tax Credit Scheme ("R&D relief").

HMRC takes its responsibility and administration of UK's Tax, Payments and Customs Authority very seriously. We continuously monitor systems and customer records to guard against fraudulent activity.

The claim triggered an alert on our systems and has caused HMRC to believe that you have fraudulently claimed money to which you are not entitled. Therefore, HMRC has blocked payment of this money, to which we believe you are not entitled.

If you think that you are entitled to this money, then you need to contact HMRC as a matter of urgency so that we can re-examine your claim and consider reinstating your payment.

Information and documents that we need:

We need for the period ended 31/03/2021

1. A breakdown and analysis of the £22188.19 claimed.

Your breakdown should categorise costs per allowable legislated headings contained in Corporation Tax Act 2009, sections 1123 to 1142.

Any additional expenses included in the calculation that do not form part of the legislated costs should be highlighted, with a rationale provided as to why they are included.

In categorising these costs you should use the following sub-headings:

A. Staffing Costs
B. Software or consumable items
C. Qualifying expenditure on externally provided workers
D. Sub-contractor payments

HM Revenue
& Customs

E. Relevant payments to subjects of a clinical trial
F. Any other costs included in the claim to relief

2. Please provide the Vat Registration Number and PAYE Scheme Reference used by the company to report VAT and PAYE liabilities for the above expenditure.

3. Bank statements showing the full expenditure incurred in part (1) above.

4. An explanation of what the scientific or technological advance(s) sought was/were.

To allow HMRC to consider your claim please provide the above documents and information within 30 days of the date of this letter. You will need to send those documents and information to the following email address; fisresearchclaims@hmrc.gov.uk and confirm you are content to accept the risk of corresponding by email. If you never made this claim, please contact the mailbox immediately.

For further guidance on how to claim R&D reliefs for small companies, please visit www.gov.uk and search for 'CIRD81900'.

Guidance on qualifying Research & Development for tax purposes can be found within HMRC guidance manuals. Visit www.gov.uk and search for 'CIRD81900.'

At this time HMRC has not opened a criminal investigation into this suspected fraud. However, you should be aware that HMRC reserves the right to open a criminal investigation into any suspected fraud committed against the R&D scheme. If HMRC did open a criminal investigation in respect of your claim in the future, then any investigation could use as evidence anything that you have said to HMRC about your claim. I mention this only so that you are fully aware of the position should you decide to contact HMRC, and to avoid any confusion.

PRIVATE & CONFIDENTIAL

To whom it may concern -

I write further to a letter from HMRC received on 10th November 2022 indicating that the R&D Tax Credit Scheme claim lodged by Claimer on behalf of Konnektis on 10th October 2022 has been blocked by HMRC. The reason for this is stated as being HMRC's belief that we are not entitled to make this claim.

As an SME shareholder and Director of Konnektis, the Covid period has been particularly challenging so that our business can continue to employ staff and support customers operating in the home care sector while investing in technological advances to support innovation in the sector that we operate in (providing technology to home care businesses that enable them to reliably support older people with complex long-term health conditions in their own homes).

I have personally experienced significant mental health challenges in navigating this period, which has increased in 2022. HMRC's letter dated 10th November 2022 and the implication that our claim was potentially fraudulent had a significant and very negative impact on my mental well-being, triggering a material increase in depressive symptoms and the emergence of thoughts about self-harm.

Given the mental health challenges I have experienced as a result of receiving this letter, I have not been in a fit mental state to properly collate the information requested by HMRC within the 30-day timetable indicated. I believe our claim is valid and relates to genuine - and risky - R&D work conducted in our financial year to 31st March 2021 to support innovation, and so reserve the right to provide the information to HMRC for consideration within the 2-year threshold that R&D Tax Credit Scheme claims can be submitted to HMRC (i.e., by 31st March 2023). I trust that HMRC will recognise the reason for the delay and will operate in good faith to evaluate our claim on its merits when the additional information requested is provided.

Yours sincerely,

M D Howells
