Gmail

Mark Howells <mark@konnektis.com>

R&D Tax Credit Scheme // Konnektis Communications Limited

Mark Howells <mark@konnektis.com>
To: fisresearchclaims@hmrc.gov.uk

9 December 2022 at 09:08

PRIVATE & CONFIDENTIAL

To whom it may concern -

I write further to a letter from HMRC received on 10th November 2022 indicating that the R&D Tax Credit Scheme claim lodged by Claimer on behalf of Konnektis on 10th October 2022 has been blocked by HMRC. The reason for this is stated as being HMRC's belief that we are not entitled to make this claim.

As an SME shareholder and Director of Konnektis, the Covid period has been particularly challenging so that our business can continue to employ staff and support customers operating in the home care sector while investing in technological advances to support innovation in the sector that we operate in (providing technology to home care businesses that enable them to reliably support older people with complex long-term health conditions in their own homes).

I have personally experienced significant mental health challenges in navigating this period, which has increased in 2022. HMRC's letter dated 10th November 2022 and the implication that our claim was potentially fraudulent had a significant and very negative impact on my mental well-being, triggering a material increase in depressive symptoms and the emergence of thoughts about self-harm.

Given the mental health challenges I have experienced as a result of receiving this letter, I have not been in a fit mental state to properly collate the information requested by HMRC within the 30-day timetable indicated. I believe our claim is valid and relates to genuine - and risky - R&D work conducted in our financial year to 31st March 2021 to support innovation, and so reserve the right to provide the information to HMRC for consideration within the 2-year threshold that R&D Tax Credit Scheme claims can be submitted to HMRC (i.e., by 31st March 2023). I trust that HMRC will recognise the reason for the delay and will operate in good faith to evaluate our claim on its merits when the additional information requested is provided.

Yours sincerely,

M D Howells
Director
Konnektis Communications Limited
Reg: 07555513